For the first time in the six years during what Sir CHARLES WOOD has held the seals of office as Secretary of State for India, he has earned the applause of the Indian press. Poor Sir CHARLES has at last decided on an act which has given universal satisfaction; he has resigned. In his treatment of the covenanted civil service, in his quarrel with Mr. LANG, in dealing with the army administration, and in scores of smaller affairs which have occupied him during his period of authority, he has incurred the disapproval of all classes alike, and as conspicuously as it is possible for a statesman to fail, Sir C. WOOD has failed in his Indian career. Week as Lord RUSSELL's cabinet had become, Sir C. WOOD's defection can hardly make it weaker. Though only two or three men in the whole ministry have had a longer training in the higher departments of official life,—for the late Indian Secretary was Secretary to the Treasury in 1852, chancellor of the Exchequer in 1846, President of the Board of Control in 1852, and more recently First Lord of the Admiralty,—a ministry even though it has to scrape the book benches for new men, loses nothing in losing him. The old fashioned Whig is almost more unfit to hold office in the present day than the old fashioned Tory. The country squire at any rate is still prepared to venerate politicians who will treat him to pompous platitudes about Church and State, the Altar and the Crown, and consistently set their faces against every measure which wears the blue and buff livery, irrespective of its purpose or merits. The old fashioned Whig, however, has no supporters left and finds that the principles of his life, which may be summed up in a few simple maxims, to govern for Whigs and by Whigs to have nothing, if possible, to do with any people but Whigs,—inapplicable to the present day when no Whigs to speak of, remain alive. The liberal conservatives like Lord STANLEY, or the reasonable radicals like John STUART MILL or STANSFELD, who are supported by the cultured section of the middle class, or the finished men of the world, statesmen by birth and breeding, like Lord DERBY or Lord GRANVILLE, who make their way by tact and good temper, (PALMERSTON was the King of this school) or the brilliant debaters like DISRAELI and GLADSTONE who can hold their own against personal unpopularity and dislike, all these varieties of men may have their chances of success and occasional power as parliamentary warfare fluctuates, and now one, now another set of men become allied with circumstances and rise to the surface of affairs. Even the men of convictions,—however, wrong they may be,—like BRIGHT or men of violent one sided prejudice like NEWDEGATE, might, in some singular concurrence of chances be endowed for a moment with a slice of power, but where is there room, under the conditions of modern life, for the man with only one belief, (sinned by nobody) a belief in himself?

It is not easy to foresee the arrangements which will be made to fill the vacancy which the retirement of Sir C. WOOD will make in the ministerial ranks. It took about a month to find a Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, a post which is creditable enough to be filled by man of the first rank, and actually unimportant enough to be filled by men of no ability, a post therefore which ought at any time to be filled with extraordinary ease. How much more difficult will it be to find an Indian Secretary whose functions are so onerous and delicate, that only a statesman of great capacity can hope to fulfil them respectibly, and which for the credit of a cabinet must be entrusted to a parliamentary veteran. The one thing which at the present crisis could give the government strength would be the defection of Lord STANLEY from the Conservation party, and his alliance with the RUSSELL ministry. Some such event has often been prophesied and it has even been supposed that it would be worth while to make a vacancy for him at the India office on the chance of tempting him back to a position which he has already occupied with so much credit to himself, and in which less than in any other worthy of his name, would he be mixed up with the fortunes of the Whigs. One is naturally driven therefore by the news of Sir C. WOOD's resignation to think whether it may not be possible that the "bad health" spoken of as its motive, be not the bad health of the government,—whether in fact he may not have been cleared out of the way in order that his chair and writing table at the Westminster Hotel might be used as a species of ground-bait wherewith to fish for Lord STANLEY. The great argument against this however, is the extreme improbability that Lord STANLEY who has refused more tempting offers before now, out of respect for his father's party, would choose such a time as this to desert, in favor of a moribund ministry, tottering to its fall, and the consequent improbability that Lord RUSSELL would in any way increase his embarrassments for a chance so slender. It is no use looking round for an unattached liberal of celebrity who might join the government at this crisis. In the classical language of Mrs. GAMP, "we don't believe there is no such a person." All that can be done is to promote, the non-commissioned officers, transfer the vacancy to a lower grade where the unsatisfactory way in which it may have to be filled up, will perhaps pass comparatively unnoticed. In this way it is not impossible that Mr. T. G. BARING will find himself at the head of the department in which he formerly served.

The agent who has been here on behalf of the Pacific Mail Steam Navigation Company, Captain S. L. PHELPS formerly of the United States navy, has gone up, we are told to Shanghai. Captain PHELPS has we believe been dispatched by the company he represents, to investigate the different advantages held out by the various ports of China and choose a terminus for the new line. Of course a man charged with such a delicate and important mission must keep his mind free from prejudice, and inquire into the respective merits of all places himself. It would not do for him to take upon trust the assurance that Hongkong is the best port for the new steamers to come to, and no doubt after looking into the claims of Shanghai he will go up to Newchwang, and in coming back call at Swatow and Amoy. Then after a personal inspection of Macao where the depth of water in the harbor, the varied activity of the commercial classes and the steady progress of trade hold out great temptations to a new line of steamers he will be able to form a sound opinion. To anticipate this is naturally impossible. Strangely enough it is said that no mail company in America would tender for the government contract except on condition that Hongkong,—which as a British settlement the Washington government wished to keep clear of,—should be the terminus of the line. Of course, if this which people say were true Captain PHELPS could not really feel any doubt about the arrangements he had to make. As this colony, however, has unexpectedly to compete for the favor of the San Francisco steamers with so many rivals, the local government will of course be eager to do all it can to help the captain to a discussion, to let him have land on low terms, any terms, so long as we have to tremble lest he should scare the mail in connexion with Ningpo, or perhaps Takao in Formosa.

That the mail would be an advantage to this colony we know full well, but we are also inclined to fancy that this colony would be an advantage to the mail.

Summary Jurisdiction Court.

Hongkong, 9th March, 1866.

BEFORE THE HON. J. C. WHYTE, Esq.

LEE KWOT TEE v NG CHUY FAN $600.

Mr. Hobson appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Pollard, Q. C., instructed by Mr. Sharp for the defendant.

The plaintiff, who is comprador at the Agra Bank, sought to recover the above sum from the defendant who is the comprador to Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co. The circumstances of the case were of a very complicated character—a building contract, a promissory note, personal security, and money lent playing important parts, the result being the above claim; to which the defendant pleaded payment, and produced a release in writing. To arrange the whole affair a meeting of the friends of both parties was convened; at which, however, only the friends of the plaintiff and Mr. Rennie attended. This amicable jury found a verdict for their friend; and also destroyed the written release which the defendant held. The defendant however having taken legal advice now resisted the claim.

After hearing the evidence his Honour dismissed the summons; saying, as this promissory note was dated the 30th January, 1864, and was payable in a month (at 4 per cent per month interest) there was something suspicious about so stale a demand.

The Bhootan War.

The Calcutta Englishman publishes the following letters tracing the last expedition to Bhootan.

"CAMP DEWANGIRI, Feb 5.

"At length the long period of inactivity here has ceased; yesterday the advance guard of a column took the initiative step in the invasion of Bhootan. The order styles the proceeding a reconnaissance, but, as the detachment of yesterday is to be followed to-day by one of nearly equal strength, and to-morrow again a third party is to proceed, the nature of the advance may be fairly regarded. The first march lies along the Bed of the Dean Nuddee to the North, and the encampment is at a place called Kaedang. The second ascends the ridge running parallel with this, about ten miles to our front, to Sulecka. This place is reported to be defended by stockades. The third march descends into the valley of the Monas river, a deep and rapid stream, eighty yards in width, which is only to be crossed by a bridge.

"At present, the instructions issued refer only to the pushing a force to this point, with a view of holding the bridge (chain), but no sane man can doubt that, once committed to an advance as all, it will be impossible to halt, far less to retrocede. It is believed, however, that some little delay will here take place, pending orders from Calcutta. The whole camp here, lately the very type of quiet dulness, resembles now a disturbed bee hive; arms bristle in every direction; mules, waiting to be laden, cover the little paradeground; elephants block up the narrow paths; and men hurry to and fro. With an air of occupation very different from the listless amusuring of idle soldiers. Nearly every one in camp turned out to see the advance guard start at 1 P. M. yesterday. Ladies even were present, for, by a strange coincidence, the arrival of our fair visitors took place exactly at the same time as the orders for the march.

"The Brigadier and Staff proceeded with the first party. Very stringent orders had been issued respecting the amount of baggage to be taken on—officers of all ranks being limited to 50lbs., and the men to 12lbs. Notwithstanding these orders, however, the train of mules and coolies of every the small detachments of three Companies of the 26th N. I., and one of Sappers, seemed almost interminable, as it wound along the narrow path of the advance. But for the pathos (the last word had been nearly written with a b) of the thing, spectators would have smiled to see the bad of the stalwart veteran in command being carried solemnly past, as if in review, by two coolies; and they might have added, not over, whether it was a soldier-like example to the troops to take twice the amount of surplus allowed to each officer, for only this one item of convenience! Assamboite are, however, difficult to shake off, but one is inclined to say, Aboitamen, to a little incident of this kind.

"The advance of the Force at present named in orders, is as follows:—

"4TH FEBRUARY.—Three Companies of 26th, one of Sappers, and the Staff.

"5TH FEBRUARY.—One Company of 26th, and one Company of 12th N. I.

"Two hundred men of 9th N. I. to be held in readiness.

"It is, of course, impossible to predict confidently the measures of the enemy, but there is every reason to believe that Tongso Penlow will persistently oppose us, trusting to the difficulties of the country and the climate. Any very determined stand in arms is highly improbable.

"Letters reached camp to-day from the advance guard, stating that they had only been able to proceed five and a half miles, the baggage being helplessly in our rear. Not a good push for the bridge this! On I go an hour or Sir Hugh Rose!"

"CAMP RAIDANG, February 9.

"The head-quarters and advance guard of our force reached the bridge over the Monas, two miles and a half from Sulcesa, on the 7th instant. The Bhoteas appeared to be taken by surprise, for, though occupying some small forts and stockades, for the protection of the bridge, they evacuated them at once on our approach, firing two or three shots only as they did so. The position was taken possession of, and, a small detachment of the 26th N. I. having been left to defend it, the remainder fell back to Sulecka. Every endeavour is now to get supplies to the front, but, as might have been anticipated, the difficulties of coolies are excessive; laden mules taking ten hours to reach Kerigumpa from Raidang, distance eight miles. The route, as at present, is from Dewangiri to Raidang, eight miles, along the bed of the Deen Nuddee, the road being difficult, from the boulders, and an entire day's work for the baggage cattle. From Raidang to Kerigumpa, eight miles; steady ascent all the way; the path very narrow in places, and so steep that many loads are thrown. Twenty-four hours did not permit of all the supplies reaching their destination. From Kerigumpa to Sulecka, nine miles; the road very narrow and difficult. The second rhododendron was first met with on this hill. Two miles and a half descent to the bridge.

"There have been many rumours, from time to time, of the probable submission of the Bhooteas, but they will take no definite course, beyond the inert and almost passive resistance for which their country, not their arms, adapt them. The enemy as he appears in the person of one or two individuals made prisoners, is a most ludicrous object; a flat wrinkled face; a form though muscular, very undersized; short cropped hair; his dress, a curious complication of dirty woollen blankets, in which he stows away half a dozen small images, his gods; his expression, when doubtful of the intentions of his captors, exceedingly like that of a monkey expecting chastisement; his arms, a bow about two feet long, with arrows made of a reed, tipped with a little bit of iron. The tout ensemble of the noble savage is certainly one of the most absurd sights possible to contemplate, when seen in marked contrast to the means provided for his subjection. But, when the laughter has subsided, there is a sense of something very like humiliation in the minds of most of us at the disproportion of the means with the end."

Crime in the Navy.

(From Daily News.)

The Admiralty has published a statistical "Report" on the crimes committed and the punishments inflicted in the Royal Navy during 1863, which must prove of great interest to all who have the welfare of the service at heart. There is something so new in putting unasked before the public information respecting the treatment and behaviour of our blue jackets on board ship, and something so very different to the spirit of the House Guards, that the "Report" commends itself to our favour almost before perusal. For this document is not the result of any motion in Parliament, but a spontaneous idea of the Admiralty, and may be looked upon as a step in the direction of ameliorating the condition of our seamen and thereby making the service more popular with the class from which our sailors are drawn. Landsmen in general have a fixed idea that hard drinking invariably forms part of every seaman's occupation or amusement whenever he is on shore, and out of sight of his officers. But this Report goes far to prove that, as in every other class of men in the world, there are amongst the seamen of our fleet, in sobriety as in other virtues, the good, the bad, and the indifferent; and that in our day the first of these three classes certainly prevails in number over the other two. Taking, for instance, our seamen to be in round numbers 50,000 for the year 1863, we find in that time the number of punishments inflicted for "being drunk," for being "the worse of liquor," and "for smuggling liquor on board ship," amounts to 0.612, or less than twenty per cent. of the whole strength of the service, a number by no means out of proportion to the prevalence of the same offence in any town population of like amount. There are, moreover, two considerations, which go far to reduce this relative number of punishments for drunkenness amongst our sailors. The first is the fact of its being next to impossible for a seaman belonging to the Royal Navy to become intoxicated without being found out and reported to his superiors; whereas in civil life, the labourer, mechanic, or artisan may, so long as he keeps out of the policeman's clutches, indulge to his heart's content, and no record of the fact be made against him. The second is that, from what we gather generally in the "Report," the conviction of 9,812 cases of drunkenness does not represent this number of men as getting drunk, for in very many instances the same offenders have repeated the offence again and again, thus increasing the cases of intoxication, although not the number of drunkards. It is, therefore, not unjust to conclude that our blue jackets are, after all, no more given to drink than the same class of men in other walks of life, although a very contrary opinion is commonly prevalent. As an example of the way in which a comparatively small number of men in the Navy appears to monopolize the punishments awarded, it is mentioned in this "Report" that on board a certain vessel (name not given) there took place during the quarter ending 30th June, 1863, 140 punishments, of which 60 were inflicted on 13 seamen. In another ship's return for the same quarter, of 76 punishments 35 apply to only eight sailors. "The thirteen defaulters," the Report goes on to state, "quoted in the first instance represent 8.8 per cent. of the crew, and they received 47.1 per cent. of the punishments. In the second instance the eight offenders represented 10.8 per cent. of the crew, and they received 46.7 per cent. of the punishments. These disproportions of crime are not by any means confined to minor cases, for it often happens that the same individual is flogged or imprisoned more than once during the year." Of what may be termed serious crime—mutiny, insubordination and such like—there appears to be very little in the Navy. In 1863, out of 16 cases of mutiny in the service, no less than 15 are attributed to the "injudicious management" of one officer, a fact which goes very far to prove how necessary it is that those who command either soldiers or sailors should be able to command themselves. There has rarely been a downright mutiny in either of the services in which the primary cause could not be traced to some act or language on the part of an officer which has needlessly irritated the men under his command. It is, however, gratifying to remark how rare this offence appears to be amongst our seamen. In fact, although the total amount of punishment inflicted throughout the fleet appears at a first glance to be considerable, we find, after a careful consideration of the whole "Report," that the number of men who have been sentenced either to greater or lesser punishment is chiefly, if not almost entirely, made up of defaulters who figure again and again in the punishment lists, and that the general body of blue jackets are on the whole exceedingly well behaved. This leads to the reflection how much better it would be for the service, and how very much more economical for the country, if the black sheep were got rid of entirely, and the turning of a man out of the fleet became the most dreadful punishment in the Navy. There are, as a matter of course, numerous petty offences for which men under naval discipline must be punished. Such consist chiefly in being late at muster, late with hammocks, dirty in person, not smart enough aloft, and the like. These do not tell against a man's general character, although they help to increase the number of punishments inflicted on him and in the ship to which he belongs. But, as a general rule, when serious crime is repeated by the same man, and when there appears no attempt at amendment, the best thing that could be done with either soldier or sailor would be to turn him adrift, making his release from the service a matter of disgrace. There used to be in old days an idea that there was but one means of reforming a badly-conducted seaman; and the consequence was that instead of flogging one devil out, seven evil spirits were flogged into every man tied up to the triangles. But it is gratifying to notice how the younger school of naval officers are gradually, although (it must be confessed) slowly, giving up this fallacy, and how the use of the lash is becoming daily more and more rare in the service. That it must ere many years are over be abolished is to certain as that the Navy will improve in character when flogging no longer exists. If these "Reports" upon the crimes and punishments of the Navy, of which the present is the second that has been published, are issued from time to time, they must effect great good in more ways than one. Not the least of these will be in creating emulation amongst captains, officers, and seamen, regarding the conduct of their respective ships. No commander of a vessel will like to see the frigate, corvette, or whatever he may have charge of figure in the published "Report" as having an ill-conducted crew; still less, knowing the universal opinion respecting the use of the lash, will any captain be anxious to have his ship noted as one "on board of which the "cat" is much used. And as the subordinate officers generally follow the opinions of their superiors, it is not too much to suppose that we shall see long see greater care than ever bestowed upon the discipline of our ships, and more pains taken to prevent crime rather than to punish it after being committed. In every way, therefore, are these Naval Reports on Crime and Punishment to be commended, and it would be well if now that they appear to be adopted for our fleet, similar statistics were furnished by the authorities of the sister service. But in these days the Navy is certainly far ahead of the Army in all matters of useful reform.—Daily News.

A Night in a Workhouse.

(From Pall Mall Gazette.)

At about nine o'clock on the evening of Monday, the 5th inst., a neat but unpretentious carriage might have been seen turning cautiously from the Kennington-road, into Princes-road, Lambeth. The curtains were closely drawn, and the coachman wore an unusually responsible air. Approaching a public-house which retreated a little from the street, he pulled up; but so close that the lights should fall upon the carriage door, nor so distant as to unsettle the mind of any one who chose to imagine that he halted to drink beer before proceeding to call for the children at a juvenile party. He did not dismount, nor did any one alight in the usual way; but any keen observer who happened to watch his intelligent countenance might have seen a furtive glance directed to the wrong door; that is to say, to the door of the carriage which opened into the dark and muddy road. From that door emerged a sly and ruffianly figure, marked with every sign of squalor. He was dressed in what had once been a small-brown coat, but which had faded to the hue of bricks imperfectly baked. It was not strictly a ragged coat, though it had lost its cuffs—a bereavement which obliged the wearer's arms to project through the sleeves two long inelegant inches. The coat altogether was too small, and was only made to meet over the chest by means of a bit of twine. This wretched garment was surmounted by a "birds-eye" pocket-handkerchief of cotton, wisped about the throat hangman fashion above all was a battered billy-cock hat, with a dissolute drooping brim. Between the neckerchief and the lowering brim of the hat appeared part of a face, unshaven, and not scrupulously clean. The man's hands were plunged into his pockets, and he shuffled hastily along in boots which were the boots of a tramp indifferent to miry ways. In a moment he was out of sight; and the brougham, after waiting a little while, turned about and comfortably departed.

This mysterious figure was that of the present writer. He was bound for Lambeth Workhouse, there to learn by actual experience how casual paupers are lodged and fed, and what the "casual" is like, and what the porter who admits him, and the master who rules over him; and how the night passes with the outcasts whom we have all seen crowding about workhouse doors on cold and rainy nights. Much has been said on the subject—on behalf of the paupers—on behalf of the officials; but nothing by any one who, with no motive but to learn and make known the truth, had ventured the experiment of passing a night in a workhouse, and trying what it actually is to be a "casual."

The porter went his way, and I followed Daddy into another apartment where were ranged three great baths each one containing a liquid so disgustingly like weak mutton broth that my worst apprehensions crowded back. "Come on, there's a dry place to stand on up at this end," said Daddy, kindly. "Take off your clothes, ticket up in your hank'shur, and I'll look 'em up till the morning." Accordingly, I took off my coat and waistcoat, and was about to do them together when Daddy cried. "That ain't enough. I mean everything." "Not my shirt, sir, I suppose!" "Yes, shirt and all; but there, I'll lend you a shirt," said Daddy. "Whatever you take in of your own will be nailed, you know. You might take in your boots, though—they'd be handy if you happened to want to leave the shed for anything; but don't blame me if you lose 'em."

With a forlitude for which I hope some day to be rewarded, I made up my bundle (boots and all) and the moment Daddy's face was turned away shut my eyes, and plunged desperately into the mutton broth. I wish from the bottom of my heart my courage had been less hasty; for hearing the splash, Daddy looked round and said, "Lor, now there was no occasion for that; you took a clean and decent sort of man. It's them filthy beggars" (only he used a word more specific than "filthy") "that want washing. Don't use that towel—here's a clean one! That is the sort; and now here's your shirt" (handing me a blue striped one from a heap), "and here's your ticket. Number thirty-four you are, and a ticket to match is tied to your bundle. Mind you don't lose it. They'll nail it from you if they get chance. Put it under your head. This is your rug—take it with you."

"Where am I to sleep, please sir."

"I'll show you."

And so he did. With no other rag but the checked shirt to cover me, and with my rug over my shoulder, he accompanied me to the door at which I had entered, and, opening it kept me standing with naked feet on the stone threshold, full in the draught of the frosty air, while he pointed out the way I should go. It was not a long way, but I would have given much not to have trodden it. It was open as the highway, with flagstones below and the stars overhead and, as I said before, I cannot help saying again, a frosty wind was blowing.

"Straight across," said Daddy, "to where you see the light shining through. Go in there and turn to the left, and you'll find the beds in a heap. Take one of 'em and make yourself comfortable." And straight across I went, my naked feet seeming to cling to the stones as though they were burning hot instead of icy cold (they had just stepped out of a bath, you should remember), till I reached the space through which the light was shining, and I entered it.

SAUCE.—LEA AND PERRINS' WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE.

ENNOUNCED BY CONNOISSEURS AND APPLICABLE TO Every Variety of DISH.

Extract of a letter from a medical gentleman at Madras to his brother at Worcester.

"Tell Lea and Perrins that their Sauce is highly esteemed in India, and is, in my opinion, the most delicious as well as the most wholesome sauce that is made.

CAUTION.

LEA AND PERRINS

Beg to caution the public against spurious imitations of their celebrated WORCESTERSHIRE SAUCE.

NOW AND MOST VALUABLE MEDICINES

Of GRIMAULT & Co., Chemists to H. I. H. Prince Napoleon, Paris. For hitherto intractable and incurable diseases.

Nature Cod Liver Oil, Grimault's Syrup of Iodized Horseradish. Price 3 Rs. a bottle, cash. Prepared by Grimault and Co., Chemists of Paris, according to the certificates of the physicians of the Paris hospitals, detailed in the printed directions, and with the approbation of several Academies. This Syrup is employed with the greatest success, in place of Cod Liver Oil, to which it is infinitely superior. It cures diseases of the chest, scrofula, lymphatic disorders, green sickness, muscular atony, and loss of appetite. It regenerates the constitution by purifying the blood, and in a word, the most powerful depurative known. It never fatigues the stomach and bowels, like Iodide of Potassium and the Iodide of Iron, and is administered with the greatest efficacy to young children, subject to humours or obstruction of the glands. Dr. Onzenoue of Saint Louis Hospital, Paris, recommends it particularly in diseases of the skin, to be taken with his Pills mentioned above. This Syrup of Iodized Horseradish is a capital adjunct to Dr. Leras' Phosphate of Iron.

No more Consumption. Grimault's Syrup of Hypophosphite of Lime. Price 2 Rs. a bottle, cash. This new Medicine is a sovereign remedy in phthisis and other diseases of the lungs, promptly removing all the more serious symptoms. The cough is relieved, the night-sweats cease, and the patient rapidly recovers his health.

No more dyspepsy, vomiting during pregnancy, and sea-sickness. Grimault & Co's Digestive Elixir of pepsine, At 3 Rupees a bottle, cash. Pepsine is the gastric juice itself or rather the active principle purified, which digests food in the stomach. When from various causes, the supply of the digestive fluid is too small, the inevitable consequences are, bad digestion, inflammation of the mucous coats of the stomach and bowels, and in females, general derangement. The elixir of pepsine sanctioned by the Paris Academy of medicine, speedily cures all such diseases, and prevents vomiting during pregnancy and while on sea-voyaging.

No more poverty of the blood and pale complexion. Drs. Leras' Phosphate of Iron 2 Rs. a bottle, cash. This new ferruginous medicine contains the elements of the blood and bones, and Iron in a liquid state. It is different from all hitherto offered to the public in liquid, odourless and tasteless. It speedily cures chlorosis, pains in the stomach, difficult digestion, dysmenorrhœa, anæmia, and advantageously supersedes Carbonate of Iron, Iron reduced by Hydrogen, Lactate of Iron, the Pills of Protoiodoiodide of Iron. The majority of the Academies of Medicine of Paris recommend the Phosphate of Iron, to Ladies of delicate constitution suffering from anæmia, and all other persons fatigued from over anxiety, nervous emotions, overwork, general debility, and poorness of blood. It is the only preparation which never causes constipation, and can be borne by the most delicate stomachs.

No more Copaiba and Cubebs. Grimault's Capsules Vegetal Liquid Extract of Mation Vegetale, at 3 Rs. and 2 Rs. a bottle, cash. Pamphlet on the use of Mation and cure of the disease, 8 annas each, cash. Where all other Medicines have failed, these preparations will always effect a cure. These insure rapid and extraordinary cure of severe recent and chronic cases of private disease, They are used in the Hospitals of Paris, by the celebrated Dr. Ricord, and are found greatly superior to all hitherto known mineral remedies and Copaiba and Cubebs. The Injection is used in recent, and capsules in the more chronic cases.

GENERAL DEPOT,
In Paris, at Grimault and Co's, 4 Rue Richelieu.
In London, at May & Son, 11 Aldersgate street.
In Hongkong, at J. A. de Silva & Sons.
In Shanghai, at John Listellier.
In Singapore, at R. Jamie.
And at every good chemist in India and China.

FIRE-ARMS Co.'S
Belland Pocket Size Cartridge Revolvers.

THE Bell size weighs 22 oz., and carries a ball 12-100 calibre (larger than Colt's Navy) and can be used with either fixed or loose ammunition. The Pocket size weighs 14 oz., and carries a ball 30-1 0 calibre (same as Colt's and 6 inch.)

These Pistols are loaded and discharged with only four motions—a degree of perfection never yet attained by any other arm. A full round may be loaded and discharged in thirty seconds. These arms have been adopted exclusively by the U. S. Revenue Service. Printed circulars (with illustrated cuts,) naming prices, sent by mail when required.

MERWIN & BRAY are also sole proprietors of the Ballard Breech-Loading Rifle and Carbine. Their high character for Military and Sporting purposes is so well established that the public only wish to know where they may be purchased. These Rifles were used by Chapman Crawford and Fisk on the Overland Expedition to the Pacific, under orders of the U. S. Government. The General Government including States of Kentucky have about Twenty Thousand (20,000) now in active field service, of which the highest testimonials are received.

Sold by Wholesale and Retail Dealers generally.

HAIR DRESSING.

PROFESSOR WHEELER begs to call the particular attention of the Public to his Hair Dressing Saloon at the private apartments of the "Oriental Hotel" (entrance Wyndham Street) and the novel manner which he displays in cleansing and dressing the hair on those who may favor him with their patronage. The great Professor's skill in Hair Dressing must now be pretty well known to most of the residents of the Colony who have patronized the novel mode of Hair Dressing by Professor Wheeler, who has had the honor of acting professionally on the perfumatorium of His Majesty the King of the Belgians.

It is the aim of Professor Wheeler to abolish the custom now existing in the Colony of the Public bestowing their patronage upon the Chinese, who set themselves up to be conversant with the art of Hair Dressing, fancying that they are self taught and their ideas differing so widely as they do in the decoration of their own Celestial Cranium, disqualifies them for any such undertaking. It being palpable in the eyes of all Europeans in China that the mode adopted by the Chinese of cutting the hair is a disfigurement to the head, therefore Professor Wheeler cautions the public against the self-vow existing of having their hair dressed by Chinese who not only disfigure their victims for the time, but entail immense labor to the accomplished Perfumator to recover it to its original shape and elasticity. Professor Wheeler is the originator of several superior Washes for the hair composed of ingredients unknown to others in the art; and by their application guarantees the removal of all sour or superfluous matter from the scalp and allows the hair a free access of growth.

PROFESSOR WHEELER, would respectfully continue the attention of the Hongkong Public to the importance of having the Hair Cut and Dressed in an Artistic manner and style Appropriate to the Individual is the cut of the Hair; there can be no fixed or prevailing fashion without destroying almost universally the harmony of the tout ensemble. Indeed as diverse as is the contour of the human head and facial outline, just so peculiar should be the trim and arrangement of the Hair. This fact is noted upon by only those Hair-Cutters who possess an inborn judgment in matters of taste, cultivated and improved by incessant study and application. Of this rare class, Professor WHEELER, humbly claims to be one, and the Only One in this Colony, and he modestly but confidently invites all who may be distrustful of his ability to give him at least a trial before pronouncing an adverse opinion. He may be found at all hours of the day in his Apartments adjoining the Private Entrance of the Oriental Hotel.
